Introduction

This collection of architectural plans was donated to the Lloyd Sealy Library in the summer of 2000. The donor was Dr. Norman Bruce Johnston, a sociologist who has studied and written about prison architecture. Dr. Johnston assembled the collection over many years, and some of the plans have been reprinted in his books. The collection was mailed to the library in one large brown cardboard box. Many of the larger plans were folded. Some of the smaller ones were stored flat in the box.

The collection is open to qualified researchers, by appointment with the Special Collections Librarian. Much of the material is brittle, and must be handled carefully. Most of the plans are too large and/or fragile to be photocopied or scanned. However, many of the plans have been reproduced in smaller form in Dr. Johnston's dissertation and books, and may easily be photocopied from those.

Researchers are responsible for obtaining permission to publish Special Collections material from the Lloyd Sealy Library and for citing the collection correctly in their publications

Biography of Dr. Norman Bruce Johnston

Dr. Norman Bruce Johnston was born in 1921. After completing an A.M. at the University of Chicago, he worked as a staff sociologist in the Illinois prison system. He completed his doctoral dissertation in sociology on the topic of the development of radial prison plans, at the University of Pennsylvania in 1958. As a Fulbright fellow in 1959, he traveled to England, Italy, France, Holland and Spain where he visited and studied prisons.

Subsequently he has visited 16 other countries and parts of the United States to study prison structures. In 1973 he served as a U.S. representative to the United Nations Consultative Group on Prison Architecture. He has taught for several years at the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Missouri –St. Louis and at Arcadia University in Glenside, PA, outside of Philadelphia, where he is now Professor Emeritus in the Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice Department.

Scope and Contents Note

This collection consists of architectural plans of prisons, mainly for Europe. Many of the plans are copies of the original blueprints, produced by the architectural firm that designed them, or by a government ministry responsible for prisons. Some of the plans appear to be copies of book plates. Most of the plans are paper based. There are a few photographs, some blueprints and some black & white prints, photocopies and photostats. The plans appear to date mainly from the mid-nineteenth to the late twentieth century. Dr. Johnston appears to have labeled many of them with the year that the prison was opened.

The collection was housed on one large box when it arrived at the library. There was no order apparent in the arrangement of the plans. As such, this collection is considered as constituting a single series. All plans have now been re-housed into acid-free boxes and folders.

Provenience Note:

This collection was donated to the Lloyd Sealy Library by Dr. Norman Bruce Johnston in the summer of 2000. These plans were received by library in one large box. No order was apparent. Dates are printed, stamped or handwritten onto each document, perhaps referring to when the plan was last updated, or to when the prison was designed or built.
